Proper handwashing is the best way to control the spread of disease
The first thirty eight years

In 1977 my wife and I decided to step out on a shaky limb and start our own business. Shaky because all I had were a couple of ideas. No business education or experience. Make it for a dollar and sell it (hopefully) for two. That was the extent of my knowledge. At age 46 I was foolhardy, as well as ignorant. And also out of work at the moment. It’s now 38 years later and we managed to dodge the statistics that show most new businesses failing in the first five years. Fortunately the gods are merciful to fools and children and here we are.

Our first product we dubbed “Cutnot.” It was a microtome knife guard for histologists. Why the microtome manufacturers didn’t build that feature into their products eludes me. Now they do. We sold some thousands of them before the manufacturers got the message.

I got a part time job developing a laboratory in a small-town hospital. The administrator decided I was the ideal sucker to be head of the infection control committee. One of the essentials of infection control is isolation signs. The Government Printing Office made these, but they consisted of many lines of small print that no one (meaning everybody) was going to read. So I stole a leaf from the international highway signs that used silhouette images and I had an artist develop symbols for masks, gowns, gloves, and handwashing. Knowing nothing about the technology of printing, I asked a printer who had made laboratory forms for me to print these in the category-specific colors. The printing machines were high speed web presses that whizzed the paper out at 60 miles an hour. Unfortunately the ink ended up where it wasn’t supposed to be and I think we trashed a ton of unusable paper. After that I learned about sheet presses and eventually coated paper and we came up with usable product which turned out to be a commercial success. Now everybody uses pictographs, but we were the first in this arena.

Next came handwashing training. We developed the GlitterBug line of invisible glowing products to help people see how well they execute handwashings. We felt our way along with the designs for the viewing devices starting with sheet-metal units with fluorescent lamps and progressing to modern methods of plastic molding and LED lamps.

And now, at age 83, I’m gambling the whole shebang on developing a hospital overbed table that converts to a patient transport wheelchair in two seconds. Some old fools just don’t know when to stop.

Providence has smiled on us. Mostly. It has been a ride with ups and downs, but thanks to you, our loyal customers, we are still here. We love you!

Now, adjust your technique to make sure that all facets of your hands get covered and make this a habit.

Germbusters Puppet Packet

The Germbusters Activity Book features word games, mazes, activities and, of course, the Looking for a Home puppet show script. This script is a play that kids can learn or use as an example for creating their own script (ages 4-10). Printed music for the songs in the script is included along with an audio CD.

The Germ Gang Activity Book (ages 7-10) goes more in depth featuring 4 common germs, Chicken Pox, Fungus, Staph and Strep. Again there is a puppet show script, class activities and the Germ Gang Song.

The Germ Game includes the game board, playing cards, 4 different colored pawns, a die and is loads of fun.

Product contains small parts which could pose a choking hazard for children under 3.

Puppets

Brevis hand puppets are just plain fun. Made from stretch socks, Bugsy and Sudsy and their friends come to life on your hand. With a squiggle of a finger or a thumb they frown, growl or smile. Kids are quickly able to make the puppets match the action of the puppet show scripts. In fact, it is easy for kids to be creative and do their own thing using the puppets as a take-off point. Puppets may be ordered individually or in one big group, shown above. Product contains small parts which could pose a choking hazard for children under 3.

We never tire of talking about hand hygiene. After all, handwashing is the single most effective thing people can do to reduce the spread of infection according to the CDC.

Because we all follow in the footsteps, handprints—and germs—of everyone who has gone before us (not to mention the stranger who is sitting next to us right now), we’ve ramped up our online and social media presence, beginning with the Brevis Blog, where our founder, Gordon Short, MD, weighs in frequently.

We also share updates on Facebook, Google+, LinkedIn, Twitter, and Instagram. Follow us to learn more from around the world of science and disease, and even earn discounts on Brevis products.

After all, it’s a germy, germy world out there!
